

Vito J. DiPietro served as a Director, Commercial Litigation Branch, Civil Division, Department of Justice, where he was responsible for intellectual property litigation until his retirement in 2004. Since joining the Department of Justice as a trial attorney in 1967, he personally handled and was responsible for supervising a wide variety of intellectual property and related litigation at the trial and appellate levels. He has considerable experience in the negotiation and settlement of patent and related disputes and has received specialized ADR training, including Core Mediation Skills Training and Advanced Training for Experienced Mediators sponsored by the Federal Judicial Center.

He is a graduate of St. Joseph's University, Philadelphia, Pa. (B.S. Electronics-Physics), Catholic University Law School (J.D.), and George Washington University Law School (LL.M.).

Before joining the Department of Justice and while in law school, he served as a Patent Examiner in the U. S. Patent and Trademark Office and a Patent Adviser for the U. S. Department of the Navy. Before attending law school, he was a computer engineer in the private sector.